

1. The first step is to identify the main components of the system. This includes the input, output, and internal state variables. The input variables are those that can be controlled or manipulated by the user. The output variables are those that are measured or observed. The internal state variables are those that are not directly measurable but are necessary to describe the system's behavior.

2.2

Fig. 7